The system is designed to provide ADP support to intelligence analysts using only one terminal type. Softcopy message distribution, intelligence data base support, graphics processing, and office automation tools will be available. In addition, the terminal selected is the same as those to be used by the rest of the USCINCLANT/CINCLANTFLT staff when accessing WIS. Of particular note is the technology transfer of a system used in the White House Communications Agency which will be used for softcopy message handling in J2, FICEURLANT and LEC.

3. (U) During FY85, the USLANTCOM intelligence analysts were provided an enhanced graphic capability with the implementation of the Prototype Ocean Surveillance Terminal (POST) and the Graphics Support System (GSS). The USLANTCOM intelligence analysts are assisted in their ocean surveillance tasks through the geographical displays of intelligence information by these two systems. The POST system provides automatic ELINT tracking and correlation, geographic and parametric filtering, and tactical calculation aids. The GSS, an interactive system designed to display submarine information is flexible and can be adapted to other forms of intelligence data.
